Ground Guide

The club moved to Keys Park in 1995, after leaving their former Cross Keys ground, where they had been playing since 1903. The purpose built Keys Park has on one side of the stadium is the Main Stand and this single tiered stand, is raised above pitch level and has 710 seats and roughly is half the length of the pitch in size, straddling the halfway line. There are small portions of open terrace to either side and at the back of the stand are some hospitality areas.

Behind one goal at the Hednesford End is a small covered seated stand, which has a capacity of 300. Although situated directly behind the goal it doesn't extend to the full width of the end, having open terracing to one side towards the Main Stand.

The other two sides of the ground are similar sized terraces. When first built they were open to the elements but have since had roofs erected over them. There is also a small club shop, located at one corner within the ground (in-between the Main Stand and Hednesford End), that offers a good selection of programmes from local clubs.

If segregation is in force then up to 900 away fans are mostly housed in the Hednesford End which has a mixture of covered seating and open terrace and in addition open terrace to one side of the Main Stand is also allocated.

Otherwise there is the Cross Keys Hotel which is about a ten minute walk away at 42 Hill Street. This pub is listed in the CAMRA Good Beer Guide and has up to eight real ales on tap the connection to the Club goes further as the former Cross Keys football ground was located at the rear of the premises and was the pub you went to before the match at the old ground.

Ground Guide

In 2007 Nuneaton Borough moved from their former Manor Park home to the then called Liberty Way stadium, after spending 90 years at their former Manor Park home. The Club went into liquidation in 2008 and were subsequently reformed as Nuneaton Town.

The stadium itself although new, is largely open three sides of the stadium are comprised of terracing, whilst the remaining side is the UK Flooring Direct Main Stand. This Main Stand is all seated and houses 514 supporters. It runs for around a quarter of the length of the pitch and has a floodlight pylon to either side.

Opposite is an open terrace, which has the Rugby Clubhouse situated at the back of it. At one end is the Britannia Tyres Stand a covered terrace, which is the home end of the ground. This stand can hold up to 1,800 fans and unusually the terracing is comprised of metal ones instead. The Stuarts Plumbing Stand is a similar looking covered terrace, but is
