Ground Guide

The main entrance to the ground is approached from a narrow road, with the view of the ground partly obscured by the Arriva Bus Depot on the left hand side. The road opens up into a car park which ends at the riverside with a modern steel footbridge allowing the public an overview of the ground and there is a small red bricked ticket office, with its green painted pitched roof.

Main Stand

The Main Stand is tall and narrow stand is a unique structure in the Welsh Premier League, the raised seating deck of 250 dark green plastic seats contrasts with the white roof and glazed side panels with ABER FC written in black on the gently sloped roof.

This side of the ground also has a number of single storey buildings around its boundary, the club house, tea hut, club shop and a small enclosed training pitch. On the opposite side of the pitch an equally narrow two storey media centre sits on the centre line, with a high platform television gantry beneath a sturdy sloping roof. The far side of this sloped grass verge, leading to a boundary wall and a more narrow landscaped grass verge behind the goal at the Hotel End, whilst to the left is a turnstile and toilet block, and seven rows of 392 uncovered seats, which leads back into the corner of the Town End.

The Town End shares its border with the bus depot, where a modern cantilever stand called the Dias Stand has unrestricted views, and seven rows of 322 seats with ATFC picked out in black. A couple of nice touches to this stand are glazed screen ends and a flagpole on one side proudly showing the welsh dragon bring the ground current seating capacity up to approx 1,000, is one of the biggest in the Premier League.

Ground Guide

Maes Tigid has to be one of the most pleasant settings to watch a game of football but the ground is only a three minutes walk from the town centre and you approach the ground from a narrow lane.

A large car park leads towards the single storey social club and changing room building and a turnstile leading out into the south-west corner of the ground. In the South of the ground this is essentially a flat expanse of grass and gravel, with a tarmac path surrounding the pitch perimeter fence and there is a small and narrow shelter behind the goal, providing shelter.

At the Castle Street side of the ground is currently a wedge shape area of land, mainly grassed, with a boundary formed by a hedge and this side houses the home and away dug outs as well as a TV, commentary gantry on the pitch centre line.

Wales Football League

At north end of the ground also consists of a wedge shape of grass, which slopes up towards Castle Street and this leaves all the facilities on the west side of the ground a large brick build plaque and an array of three separate lightweight prefabricated stands, each with three rows of light blue plastic seats given the grounds combined seating capacity of around 500.

The Oval is quite an open ground with portions of open standing areas on three sides. On one side is the small but smart looking Main Stand. This covered all seated stand is free of any supporting pillars and gives good views of the pitch. Sitting astride the halfway line it runs for around a third of the length of the pitch, with flat standing areas on either side. Unusually the team dugouts are not located in front of the Main Stand, but on the opposite side of the ground on the East Side of the ground are largely open standing areas, although one side running up towards the Club Shop in one corner, the standing area is elevated.

At one end is a small covered seated stand, called the Hendre End and although only three rows high and having a number of supporting pillars running across the front of it, it does extend the full width of the pitch with the club buying the seats from this stand came from Shrewsbury Town's old Gay Meadow ground. Opposite at the Marcus Street End is a largely open terrace which has a small basic looking covered area behind the goal.

The grounds only seated spectator accommodation is set back a long way from the pitch because of the athletic track but the view from the Main Stand is actually very good, holding six rows of 420 maroon coloured plastic seats is reached by two wide maroon painted steel stairwells either side of the players pitch side entrance at the front of the stand. The row of 12 floodlights arranged on the front face.

The stand is flanked by a pair of modern floodlights which have the benefit of being level with the front of the stand and not interrupting the view of the pitch from any of the seats.

On the ground in front of the stand spectators can get a standing view of the pitch however this is regarded more as an access walkway, with the roof line of the stand not overhanging enough to be able to provide any cover from the elements.

There is an additional low cover to one side provided shelter for disabled supporters. With the far side of the stadium has a narrow two storey media centre and TV gantry on the pitch centre line flanked by a pair of matching floodlight pylons.

Ground Guide

The stadium is located half a mile to the west of the town centre, and is sandwiched between two housing estates. Entering the ground through the gates at the Park Lane/North End to there is combination of two stands squeezed between the corner post and the pitch centre line.

A low, narrow modern cantilever stand holds 200 blue seats on a single tier. This leads to a wooden turnstile block and a further narrow seated stand with the tv and commentary gantry perched on its roof.

The remaining areas of this, the Police Station side of the ground consist of flat standing areas with a hedge of green providing a pretty border which leads onto the Llanidloes Road end, which is a tree lined flat standing area with an open seated structure behind the goal, backing onto a housing estate.

Park Lane is currently a narrow flat standing area behind the goal, its border also formed by a hedge and this leads to the main stand side of the ground, which has as its backdrop a hill of green pastures.

The 400 seat modern cantilever stand with its roof which seems to be out of proportion to the seating deck beneath with the views from the stand are unobstructed and there is a small gap to the old Main Stand which sits roughly on the pitch centre line. Despite being only two thirds the size of the new stand this low structure holds around the same number of seats, though its low roof only covers the rear few rows of seating. Looking further to the left of this stand is the newest structure in the ground, the 2 storey chalet style executive suite. This leads to two more low structures leading up to the corner post of the Llanidloes Road end, the club offices and the Latham Centre, a 200 capacity function suite.

Ground Guide

Park Hall, was the former home of Oswestry Town and was an athletics circuit until a few years ago with a small stand on the south side. This stand has now been replaced by a sprawling 2 level complex called The Venue, which consists of a large car park, a bowling alley, and a fitness centre on the top floor, and the football club offices, dressing rooms on the lower floor leading out to pitchside.

Two sides of the ground look out onto a countryside setting, sheltered by a row of trees that once surrounding the oval shape of the athletics circuit and the ground itself does have a perimeter fence, but not of the type you would normally associate at a football ground, as the whole pitch is visible from the football traffic car park at the Burma Road end.

The North and West sides of Park Hall are essentially the same being a narrow strip of flat standing tarmac surrounds the pitch with the remains of the athletics circuit now outside the borders of the ground.

The Venue side of the ground give the impression that Park Hall is a well-developed stadium, but there is a temporary seating structure on the South side with a all seated stand with a canvas roof, with a capacity of just under 300 sits towards the East End and for bigger games then additional temporary seating can be brought in to sit directly in front of the bare wall of the Venue.

The stadium has been improved recently with the opening of a new semi-permanent structure at the East End and this covered all seated stand has a capacity of 500but it only runs for half the width of the pitch ending just behind the goal, but it is hoped that at some point it can be doubled in size to fill the whole end and have corporate hospitality boxes incorporated at the back of it.

Driving to the Ground

Take the M56 and then take the A495 from Ellesmere, through the village of Whittington. Once over the railway line turn right into Burma Road and the ground is on the right hand side, with the football traffic car park being behind the Burma Road end, on the former athletics circuit.

Ground Guide

Jenner Park occupies the space of land between Barry's Gladstone Road and Barry Road and has been the setting for the evolution of Barry's senior football club for more than 100 years, as well as hosting athletics, greyhound racing and other attractions over the decades.

Named after the Jenner family who had gifted the land, the ground was built by the Barry football enthusiasts for their representative side to compete at the highest possible level and was completed between the landmark meeting of 1912 and the opening fixture of 1913–14.

Among the most notable Barry matches played at Jenner Park have been European ties, domestic cup finals, major semi-finals and quarter-finals, FA Cup fixtures, televised matches, testimonials, high-scoring thrillers and friendlies against high-profile opposition.

Comprised initially of two wooden stands, popular bank terracing was added in 1923 and floodlights added in the 1940s, allowing Jenner Park to host Wales' first ever floodlit football match between Barry and Newport in 1949–50.

Main Stand

During the 1980s, the local council rebuilt Jenner Park, installing a synthetic running track, a new all-seater stand and improved floodlights. Then, in order to bring Jenner Park up to UEFA standards, a second covered stand was built in the mid-1990s, boosting the seating capacity to 2,500. This was increased to over 6,000 for the visits of Aberdeen and Manchester United in 1996 with the use of temporary bleachers behind each goal.

Wales Football League

Approaching the ground through the car park the rear of the modern main stand called the Clay Shaw Butler Stand is far more impressive on the inside than the outside. The stand has 1,000 seats on a single tier concrete deck, with a cantilever roof offering fine unobstructed views of the pitch.

To the right of this stand, behind the goal at the Priory Street end is a flat standing area alongside the portakabin club shop and tea hut and on the left is the Richmond terrace end, this area of the ground is currently open to the wooden boundary fence, with a row of suburban houses peering over in the distance.

This leaves a combination of structures on the far side of the ground, a number of new single storey buildings form the new study centre leading from the Richmond Terrace End to the pitch centre line, with a two storey white clad clubhouse taking up the space between the centre line and the Priory Street end and this building has a metal stairway leading the first floor social club, with impressive views offered of the ground from the glazed lounge

The pitch is surrounded by two stands. One of the stands, The Don James stand is the bigger of the two. Admirably, for this level of football, it offers wheelchair access and symbolizes the ambition and professionalism laid on by the club.

The other stand is a slightly older and smaller stand, which I later learn is lovingly nicknamed "The Shed". "The Shed" is split with half seating and half standing room. It sits slightly further back from the field than its counterpart, and as such is largely empty.

The Rock Stadium which was opened in 2010 is situated in the village of Rhosymedre, it was built near a disused quarry and although there is only one stand at the ground, the pitch sits in the shadow of a sizeable rock face which is located just beyond the ground perimeter on the West Side.

The Main Stand on the East side of the stadium, is a small all seated stand, that is covered and has a capacity of 500 seats. It does not run the full length of the pitch being around a quarter of the length, sitting astride the half way line and on one side of this stand there is a separate large building which houses the Club house and dressing rooms, whilst the other side is empty. The other three sides of the stadium do not have facilities for spectators as such, just a flat pathway around the perimeter of the playing area.

Maesdu Park is largely an open ground, you enter the ground at the Clubhouse End and this end of the ground is filled with a number of white coloured buildings that house the Clubhouse, changing rooms and Club offices.

In front of these is a large flat standing area. Opposite at the East end, is a small covered stand, which is situated directly behind the goal and runs for around half the width of the pitch. It has a mixture of covered seating and standing areas. On the North side of the ground, is the largest of the stands. Running from the half way line down to the East End, this covered all seated stand, has only four rows of seats, but at least it free from any supporting pillars.

On the other side of this mast is an unusual looking two storey brick building that houses the stadium announcer and has an executive area. Opposite on the remaining side the team dugouts are situated on either side of the halfway line. Above the dugouts is a scaffold raised platform that serves as a television gantry. Towards the Clubhouse End there is a small all seated covered stand, whilst the other side has a portakabin type structure that also serves as an Executive area, with seating out front.

Ground Guide

Prestatyn moved to their present site in 1969 when their previous ground at the rear of the Central Beach Club (the large public house that can be seen directly opposite the ground) was sold off for development.

Thus the scene remained virtually unchanged until the 1992/3 close season when, after being elected to the Welsh Alliance League as runners-up to St Asaph City, a post and rail was erected around the pitch along with brick built dugouts.

This work was initiated by club stalwart Henry Porter and then chairman Glyn Breeze Jones and part of the labour was carried out by community service offenders. In the mid-1990s old bus shelters were acquired from Prestatyn Town Council after the main bus station in the town centre was modernised and these were put up on the cricket field side of the ground which although something of an eyesore, offered adequate protection from the rain and gave the ground a more `enclosed` feel. In 1995 the committee decided that in-house bar facilities were needed and with the help of a loan from Prestatyn Town Council, the building was extended towards the cricket field and a small bar installed and gave the club its first proper base for meetings.

But the biggest changes came in the summer of 2008 when, having clinched promotion to the Welsh Premier League, the committee and volunteers were left with just eight days to bring the ground up to the required criteria.

The club's original application was due to be heard in March but was deferred until 23 April. The deadline to meet the criteria was 1 May. At the meeting of Denbighshire County Council at Ruthin on the 23rd, the application was heard at 10am and passed through 'on the nod' in record time, by five past ten chairman Tony Thackeray had phoned the good news to the ground and by ten past the workmen were hard at it, digging footings for lights and laying concrete bases for the new seats. In just eight days the floodlights were put up and working, a turnstile block was built, 200 extra seats were installed, a press box went up, the referee's changing accommodation was revamped and the whole ground was tidied up and painted. The then Welsh Premier League Secretary John Deakin came to inspect the work and passed the ground as fit for promotion.

In order to meet the new higher criteria when the Welsh Premier League's format changed to the Super 12 in 2010/11, Prestatyn were required to build further spectator accommodation, improve car parking facilities, provide more hard standing, enlarge the dressing rooms and create more turnstile entrances. The Seasiders carried out ongoing work throughout their inaugural WPL season, paying for it as and when funds allowed. At Christmas 2008, the open seats were covered and in March 2009 a further 60 seats were added and covered which meant Bastion Gardens had the requisite 500 seating capacity to comply with the FAW Domestic Licence. For the big Bank Holiday derby on Easter Monday 2009, the old pay hut which had stood at the clubhouse end was given a makeover and installed at the top of the ground where a new walkway and railing were also added.

In early 2009 plans were submitted to Denbighshire Council for another 500 seat stand behind the top goal and a brick built facility to house the boardroom, club shop, tea bar, a toilet and stores. In spring 2009 the club were awarded a grant of £8,500 towards the cost of installing a concrete panel fence along the whole of the Bastion Gardens side and across the top end of the ever-improving stadium. On 29 July 2009, Denbighshire's planning committee unanimously approved submissions for the new stand - which would also contain a refreshment bar, additional toilets and disabled seating - behind the 'top' goal as well as a combined TV gantry and interview area plus a police control room on the Bastion Gardens side. Coming on the back of earlier approval for the utility building and an extension to the dressing rooms and covered terracing/seating at the Clubhouse end, the Seasiders now had the requisite permission to build all the facilities they needed to meet the Domestic Licence and also the UEFA Licence in due course.

In January 2010 after a two-month delay, the Welsh Grounds Improvements Trust awarded them just short of £32,000 to build a new medical room, extend the dressing rooms to meet the new criteria, lay down concrete over the grassed areas in front of the clubhouse and build a new TV gantry and police control room. In addition a spacious disabled area was also built which provided covered accommodation for six spectators and their carers if needed, all sited within easy reach of the club's facilities.
